

The Now World Order, an anti-marketing campaign for schools, presents simple awareness as a choice. We entertain parents while breaking down the barriers between them and their children by playing into their fear, or love of fear. We empower them.

The Shizo is within us all. The disease enters us through any number of programs, which are dangerous to discuss in detail. The important fact is: It can be overcome.

The Walkway to Wellness appears after a miracle of life intervenes, directing parcels of self-awareness to the victims, aiding their situation-awareness. Subsequent self-analysis and community-assistance help victims identify reality amidst the tsunami tides of spoken language.

When photons pass from an object into the human eye, the brain can interpret the quanta in infinite ways. Nevertheless, the object in its own time and space is unchanged. It is what it is, nothing less, nothing more. This confusing situation can only be transcended through languages which name the patterns created by interaction with the self, and isolating those words from their original point, in static, non-human, time and space.

Example: The voice / ego / wants / fears / little baby / monster / evil / spiky character.

Relevant Scenario: In the office, tired and stressed, a weakened immune system creates space for voices to gain dominance. The created story drifts from the current time and space and lays anchor in the past. A spiteful text is sent.

The point is: Be present.

The ego is masculine—always in conflict. In its finite lifespan on this planet, it projects into the futures or past. It wants regret, or it is indifferent. The soul is different—nonjudgemental. It exists in the present as a portal into the machine of illusion.

When conscious sinks from soul to ego, it risks exposure to fiery urges. With practice, it is possible to stay present, and look into the energy fields without submerging.
